

ABSTRACT

A construction machine refueling system receives information transmitted from a construction machine at a receiver provided in a base station, and the construction
5 machine includes a detector that detects a residual fuel amount and a transmitter that, when the residual amount of fuel is less than a specified value, transmits information indicating that fact to the base station.